Esther

Esther loved to crochet. She made beautiful crocheted items for family and friends.

In 1983, Esther began work as a seamstress at ND School for the Deaf. She sewed curtains and bedspreads and repaired clothes for children who lived in the dormitory.

Esther also helped serve meals for special events.

The students loved Esther's warm, loving personality.

In 1999, at age 70, Esther retired.

Lake Region Unsung Hero

In October, 1996, Esther was honored with Lake Region's Unsung Hero Award.

An article about Esther's award was printed in the local newspaper. The article stated:

"The story of the Frelich's devotion to their family and the education of their children is a great inspiration. Anyone having visited their home is aware of the great love and respect that all of the family members have for one another. It takes skilled parenting to communicate the feeling to each child that he/she is loved best."

Frelich Playground

The Frelich Playground on the campus of NDSD was named in honor of the Frelich family. The playground was dedicated on August 24, 1997.

Class of 1962.

Gallaudet University,
Washington, DC,
is the only 4-year liberal arts
college in the world for deaf students.

In fall, 1962, Phyllis enrolled in Gallaudet.
She majored in Library Science
and became actively involved in acting
and the theater.

National Theater of the Deaf

In 1967, during her senior year at Gallaudet, the National Theater of the Deaf (NTD) was founded. Phyllis was a charter (founding) member. NTD provided opportunities for Phyllis and other young deaf actors to perform on stage. In 1968 Phyllis made her debut with the National Theater of the Deaf.

National Theater of the Deaf

Robert

Phyllis

While acting with the National Theater of the Deaf, Phyllis met the stage designer. His name was Robert Steinberg.

Robert was a hearing man. He liked Phyllis and learned sign language so that he could communicate with her better. The two fell in love and were married on May 17, 1968.

Family

Robert & Phyllis

Phyllis and Robert were married for 46 years. Throughout their married life, Robert often interpreted for Phyllis or added voice to her sign language.

Robert and Phyllis had two sons, Reuben and Joshua (both born hearing).

The boys grew up using American Sign Language (ASL) and English - fluent in both languages.

Mark Medoff with Phyllis

While with the National Theater for the Deaf, Phyllis met a playwright named Mark Medoff. Medoff saw Phyllis perform and was impressed by her skilled acting abilities. He was aware that it was difficult for Phyllis to obtain acting roles so Medoff, with Phyllis in mind, wrote a play. The main character was deaf. The play portrayed the communication struggles encountered by deaf people during their interactions with hearing people. Phyllis auditioned for Medoff's play and got the lead role as Sarah.

Note: Medoff wrote the play for Phyllis and though the story is loosely based on her life, it is not the life story of Phyllis Frelich.

Children of a Lesser God

The play Medoff wrote was called Children of a Lesser God.

Both the play and performances by Phyllis and co-star, John Rubenstein, received rave reviews.

The play ran on Broadway for more than two years (1979-82).

Phyllis starred in 887 performances of Children of a Lesser God.

In 1980, Phyllis won a Tony Award for best actress for her performance in Children of a Lesser God.

Phyllis was the first deaf person to ever win the Tony Award.

After winning the award,
Phyllis expressed her joy and excitement. She signed,
“I was so happy,
I felt like Cinderella.”

Phyllis, like Sarah in the play, never had the desire to talk. In an interview Phyllis signed,

“I was born deaf. Sound is something I have never known. I am perfectly happy as I am.”

Rough Rider Award

On April 27, 1981,
Governor Allen Olson
presented Phyllis with the
*Theodore Roosevelt
Rough Rider Award*.
This award is bestowed upon North Dakotans who have achieved fame and success.
The portrait of Phyllis (right)
is displayed in the
ND Rough Rider Hall of Fame
in the state capitol in Bismarck.

Deaf Activist

Phyllis was known as a deaf activist. In Hollywood, Phyllis advocated for deaf actors. She encouraged producers and directors to hire deaf people to act in deaf character roles rather than hiring hearing people to act the parts. Phyllis was considered a 'trail blazer' - she 'paved the road' for other deaf actors to get roles in Hollywood.

Marlee Matlin as Sarah

In 1986, five years after the Broadway play, Hollywood producers decided to make a film version of Children of a Lesser God. Although Phyllis wanted to try out for the role, she was told that producers wanted a younger actress. A young deaf woman named Marlee Matlin was hired to act in the movie role that Phyllis played on Broadway.

At the 1986 Academy Awards, Marlee won an Oscar trophy for best actress for her performance in
Children of a Lesser God.
Marlee was the first deaf
person to win an Oscar.

After Phyllis won the Tony Award and Marlee won the Oscar Award, more
Hollywood doors opened for Phyllis and Marlee (and other deaf actors too).

Below is a partial list of Phyllis' Hollywood filmography:

In 2011, Phyllis & Marlee

In 1998, singer/song writer, Jewel, sang the Star Spangled Banner before the start of the Super Bowl game between the Green Bay Packers and the Denver Broncos.

Phyllis simultaneously performed the song in American Sign Language for viewers who were deaf.

Like her mother, Esther, Phyllis was a very good seamstress. During her leisure time, Phyllis enjoyed sewing quilts.

Phyllis inspired students to reach for their dreams!

Each year, Phyllis visited her parents in Devils Lake. While she was home, she also visited the ND School for the Deaf. Everyone at school looked forward to seeing Phyllis. She encouraged students to dream big, set goals and to study and work hard in order to attain their goals.

Phyllis was an enthusiastic and positive role model for the children!

Autobiography Unfinished

Phyllis planned to write her autobiography. She spent time at NDSD researching issues of early Banners* and other historical documents stored in the archives at the ND School for the Deaf. She hoped to piece together forgotten memories of her growing up years at NDSD.

* The Banner is the school newspaper. Publication began in 1891, one year after the school was established. The entire set of Banners, from 1891 to present, is preserved in the library at the ND School for the Deaf.

Unfortunately, Phyllis was not able to complete her project.

Phyllis died on April 10, 2014

In the spring of 2014, Phyllis died of progressive supra-nuclear palsy (PSP), a rare, incurable degenerative neurological disease. She was 70 years old.

Her husband Robert said,
“Phyllis was extraordinary - the finest sign language actress there ever was.”

Fall, 2014

*The Deaf West Theater Organization produced a film in her memory called, A Celebration of the Life of Phyllis Frelich.

The Deaf West Facebook page posted:

"A leading light of our community has been lost, and we mourn deeply."

In an interview, Phyllis once said,

“My parents are secure, independent deaf people.
The family is the first thing for them - we are close.
They taught us kids pride - they never let us accept pity.

People would come and say,
‘Oh no! You mean you are all deaf? How awful!’

We were never allowed to pay attention to that.

I respect my parents so much!
They made our family very close in the heart.”
